

Contents

|   |           |
|---|-----------|
| List of illustrations                                  | vii       |
| Preface and acknowledgements                           | ix        |
| Introduction: Studying human rights                    | 1  |
| Social science and human rights                        | 2         |
| Structure of the book                                  | 6         |
| 1 The scope of human rights                            | 8  |
| Categories and dimensions of human rights              | 8         |
| International human rights instruments                 | 13        |
| Regional human rights instruments                      | 15        |
| Limiting human rights?                                 | 17        |
| Suggestions for further reading                        | 18        |
| 2 The terrain of human rights                          | 19 |
| Human rights organizational fields                     | 19        |
| The complex terrain of human rights                    | 34        |
| Suggestions for further reading                        | 34        |
| 3 Social theory and human rights                       | 36 |
| Rationalism  | 37        |
| Structuralism  | 45        |
| Culturalism  | 48        |
| Areas of convergence                                   | 52        |
| Theorizing human rights                                | 54        |
| Suggestions for further reading                        | 55        |
| 4 Social science methods and human rights              | 58 |
| An epistemological continuum                           | 59        |
| Cross-national generalizations and comparative methods | 64        |

vi Contents

Quantitative and qualitative evidence 70
Methods matter 74
Suggestions for further reading 74

5 Measuring human rights 75

From concepts to indicators 76
Extant measures 78
Lacunae 91
Suggestions for further reading 92
Online resources 92

6 Global comparative studies 93

Research design and basic quantitative techniques 93
Extant global comparative studies 99
Limitations to global comparative analysis 103
Suggestions for further reading 106

7 The social science of truth commissions 107

Capturing the complexity of a human rights event 110
Multiplying sources and statistical estimation 117
More than 'getting the number right' 123
Suggestions for further reading 125

8 Human rights impact assessment 126

Types of human rights impact assessment 127
Theories of change and impact complexity 130
Analytical techniques for impact assessment 132
From past experiences to future planning 139
Suggestions for further reading 139

9 Theory and method in studying human rights 140

Reviewing the main thrust of the book 140
Remaining challenges for a social science of human rights 144

Notes 147
References 149
Index 170