

Contents

Acknowledgements	xvi
Prologue: a tale from days of olde with a sad ending	1
Introduction	8
PART I
Does neoclassical trade theory provide a justification for free trade?	13
1 Classical and neoclassical free trade theory	15
2 Special problems of neoclassical trade theory: the assumptions as prerequisites of the free trade postulate	28
3 General problems of neoclassical welfare economics	50
4 Summary of Part I	57
PART II
Do the functional conditions of the market order provide a justification for free trade?	59
5 The knowledge problem as a central challenge in economics and its neglect in neoclassical equilibrium theory	61
6 The aim neutrality and rule dependence of the market order	65
7 Resolving the knowledge problem in the market order	72
8 Efficiency as justification of the market order in general and of economic policy in particular	77
9 Market order and policy on international trade	84

10 Summary of Part II	92
-----------------------	----

PART III

The order of liberty	95
-----------------------------	-----------

11 The principles of the order of liberty	97
---	----

12 Reasons for and justification of the order of liberty as a societal principle	115
--	-----

13 The state in the order of liberty	124
--------------------------------------	-----

14 'Freedom' and 'equality' as material claims against society?	145
---	-----

15 Summary of Part III	150
------------------------	-----

PART IV

International trade and trade policy in the order of liberty	155
---	------------

16 The spheres of freedom of market participants involved in international trade	157
--	-----

17 Free trade as an integral part of the order of liberty	163
---	-----

18 Special trade restrictions on goods markets in the order of liberty	165
--	-----

19 Trade restrictions on factor markets in the order of liberty	184
---	-----

20 The causes of and possible approaches to overcoming protectionism	187
--	-----

21 Summary of Part IV	203
-----------------------	-----

Notes	206
--------------	-----

Bibliography	240
---------------------	-----

Name index	276
-------------------	-----

Subject index	281
----------------------	-----

Detailed contents

Acknowledgements xvi

Prologue: a tale from days of olde with a sad ending 1

Introduction 8

PART I

Does neoclassical trade theory provide a justification for free trade? 13

1 Classical and neoclassical free trade theory 15

1.1 The origins of the concept of free trade 15

1.2 Classical free trade theory 16

1.2.1 The theorem of comparative costs 16

1.2.2 The influence of the demand for goods 16

1.3 The standard model of neoclassical free trade theory 17

1.3.1 The neoclassical critique of classical trade theory 17

1.3.2 The basic idea of the opportunity cost approach 18

1.3.3 The assumptions of neoclassical free trade theory 19

1.3.4 Welfare optimum in the closed economy 19

1.3.5 Global welfare optimum in the case of free trade 21

1.3.6 The causes of the welfare-enhancing nature of free trade 23

1.3.7 Welfare optimum of a single country in the case of free trade 24

1.3.8 Welfare inferiority of unilateral trade protection 25

1.3.9 Welfare superiority of unilateral free trade 26

1.4 Conclusion 27

2 Special problems of neoclassical trade theory 28

- 2.1 Influencing the terms of trade: optimal tariff policy 28
- 2.1.1 The monopoly model in neoclassical trade theory 28
  - 2.1.2 The model of bilateral monopoly in neoclassical trade theory 32
  - 2.1.3 Conclusion 34
- 2.2 International mobility of factors of production 34
- 2.2.1 International factor mobility in the standard model of perfect competition 34
  - 2.2.2 International factor mobility in the monopoly model 35
  - 2.2.3 Conclusion 37
- 2.3 Externalities 37
- 2.3.1 Nationally limited externalities 37
  - 2.3.2 Cross-border externalities 38
  - 2.3.3 Conclusion 39
- 2.4 Immobility and price rigidity in domestic factor markets 40
- 2.4.1 Intersectoral factor immobility 40
  - 2.4.2 Factor price rigidity 40
  - 2.4.3 Conclusion 41
- 2.5 Market power in the national commodity markets: the 'new trade theory' 41
- 2.5.1 Strategic trade policy in the case of market power in the import-competing industry 42
  - 2.5.2 Strategic trade policy with market power in the export industry 44
  - 2.5.3 Conclusion 49
- 2.6 Summary 49

3 General problems of neoclassical welfare economics 50

- 3.1 The problem of distorted preferences as a result of rational ignorance 50
- 3.2 The problem of non-economic preferences 52
- 3.3 The problem of preference aggregation 52
- 3.4 Maximization of the national income instead of maximization of social welfare? 54
- 3.5 Conclusion 56

4 Summary of Part I 57

PART II

Do the functional conditions of the market order provide a justification for free trade?	59
5 The knowledge problem as a central challenge in economics and its neglect in neoclassical equilibrium theory	61
5.1 The neglect of the knowledge problem in neoclassical equilibrium theory	61
5.2 The knowledge problem as a central challenge to economics	63
6 The aim neutrality and rule dependence of the market order	65
6.1 The aim neutrality of the market order	65
6.2 The system of rules of conduct underlying the market order	66
6.3 The different meanings of 'market order'	68
6.4 The inherent conflict between aim neutrality and the dependence of the market order on a system of rules of conduct	69
6.5 Conclusion	70
7 Resolving the knowledge problem in the market order	72
7.1 Coordination of individual actions through the price system and through negative feedback	72
7.2 Competition as an incentive procedure and as a discovery procedure	73
8 Efficiency as justification of the market order in general and of economic policy in particular	77
8.1 Efficiency of the abstract model of the market order	77
8.2 On the efficiency of Ordnungspolitik and of the resulting specific orders of rules of conduct	78
8.2.1 Can the efficiency of Ordnungspolitik be directly determined?	78
8.2.2 Compliance with the functional conditions of the market order: an efficiency criterion?	79
8.3 On the efficiency of other economic policies	81
8.4 Conclusion	82
9 Market order and policy on international trade	84
9.1 The functional conditions of the market order in the open economy	84

9.2	The implications of the functional conditions of the market order for trade policy in general	85
9.3	International competition as an incentive and discovery procedure and its restriction by active trade policy	87
9.4	On the question of the international distribution of efficiency gains derived from free trade	90
9.5	Conclusion	91
10	Summary of Part II	92
PART III
	The order of liberty	95
11	The principles of the order of liberty	97
11.1	The right to freedom	97
11.1.1	The general definition of the right to freedom	97
11.1.2	The limits of the right to freedom in general	98
11.1.3	The limits of the right to freedom with regard to economic competition	102
11.1.4	Freedom and personal responsibility	104
11.1.5	Conclusion	108
11.2	The principle of equality	109
11.2.1	General definition of the principle of equality	109
11.2.2	The limits of the principle of equality	110
11.2.3	What of prohibiting unequal treatment in the private realm?	112
11.2.4	Conclusion	113
11.3	The principle of democracy	113
12	Reasons for and justification of the order of liberty as a societal principle	115
12.1	Reasons for and justification of the right to freedom	115
12.1.1	Freedom as a value in itself	115
12.1.2	Freedom as a prerequisite for the market order	115
12.1.3	Freedom as a prerequisite for the development of civilization	116
12.2	The problem of the justification of freedom and equality: the order of liberty and the unanimity principle	119

12.2.1	The irrelevance of the unanimity principle to the justification of the right to freedom	119
12.2.2	The irrelevance of the unanimity principle to the justification of the principle of equality	121
12.2.3	The residual applicability of the unanimity principle	122
13	The state in the order of liberty	124
13.1	Tasks and limits of coercive state activities	124
13.1.1	The state's monopoly on coercion and the rule of law	124
13.1.2	Coercive state activities and the right to freedom	125
13.1.3	Coercive state activities and the principle of equality	126
13.1.4	Coercive state activities and the principle of democracy	127
13.1.5	The financing of coercive state activities	129
13.1.6	Conclusion	130
13.2	The problem of non-coercive state activities	130
13.2.1	Public services and the order of liberty	131
13.2.2	The specific example of subsidies and the order of liberty	133
13.2.3	Is the principle of the social state a justification for non-coercive public services?	134
13.2.4	The illusion of market failure as justification for non-coercive public services	135
13.2.5	A categorization of public services in the light of the principles of the order of liberty	138
13.2.6	Conclusion	140
13.3	The order of liberty and the scope for Ordnungspolitik	141
13.4	Welfare economics: the invitation to the state to instrumentalize freedom	143
14	'Freedom' and 'equality' as material claims against society?	145
14.1	'Freedom'	145
14.2	'Equality'	146
14.3	Critique	147
15	Summary of Part III	150

PART IV

International trade and trade policy in the order of liberty 155

16 The spheres of freedom of market participants involved in international trade 157

16.1 The sphere of freedom of foreign exporters and importers and of other foreigners 157

16.2 The sphere of freedom of national importers and exporters 158

16.3 The sphere of freedom of national import competitors 159

16.4 The sphere of freedom of other national individuals 161

16.5 Conclusion 162

17 Free trade as an integral part of the order of liberty 163

18 Special trade restrictions on goods markets in the order of liberty 165

18.1 Trade restrictions for the opening up of foreign markets: aggressive unilateralism 165

18.1.1 The theses of aggressive unilateralism illustrated through a treatise by Tyson 166

18.1.2 Concrete critique of aggressive unilateralism, illustrated by Tyson's treatise 170

18.1.3 Abstract critique of aggressive unilateralism 172

18.2 Trade restrictions for the protection of the right to freedom of foreign and national individuals 175

18.2.1 Trade restrictions for the protection of the right to freedom of foreign individuals 175

18.2.2 Trade restrictions for the protection of the right to freedom of national citizens 176

18.3 Dumping and anti-dumping measures 178

18.3.1 Dumping 178

18.3.2 Anti-dumping measures 181

18.3.3 Conclusion 183

19 Trade restrictions in the factor markets in the order of liberty 184

19.1 Measures against foreign direct investment 184

19.2 Measures against the employment of foreigners 185

20	The causes of and possible approaches to overcoming protectionism	187
20.1	Causes of protectionism I: political activism as a consequence of instinct and ignorance	187
20.2	Causes of protectionism II: the influence of protectionist special interest groups	189
20.2.1	The problem of special interest groups in general	189
20.2.2	Special interest groups and protectionism	190
20.3	Possible approaches to overcoming protectionism	193
20.3.1	Representative and absolute democracy as the central problems	193
20.3.2	The optimal solution and a critique of Hayek's model democracy	198
20.3.3	Less far-reaching solutions designed specifically for dismantling protectionism	200
21	Summary of Part IV	203
	Notes	206
	Bibliography	240
	Name index	276
	Subject index	281

สำหรับเพื่อการศึกษาและการอ้างอิงเท่านั้น
For educational use and reference only